From the Inside Flap

Excerpt: 2252'52.27 North latitude I can't leave, the desert is calling: the sahuaro cactus are warriors that urge me on, and chollas are the armor protecting me. My patient brothers the puma and falcon show me the way. In the silence, the whistling wind fortifies me. I take wings and fly: I'm the breeze over whales and shimmering schools of fish. I'm grilled food with fine wine, the candle glowing on a loving gesture. I'm exercise, adventure, a boat, riches, the best music; I never weary of all this. I'm flower-scents in the garden, a golf course's expanse of green lawn; I'm massage, laughter, a kiss, an embrace. I'm the firelight on a night of mysteries, an embroidered edging, an exquisite view. I'm scorched sand; I'm cool wet at the edge of the sea. I'm lust for life to its fullest; they call me Los Cabos.
