An Islamic Approach to Rehabilitation of Muslim Prisoners: An Empirical Case Study Dr. Tariq Mahmood Awan

An Islamic approach to rehabilitation of Muslim Prisoners: An Empirical Case Study reviews the prevailed rehabilitative approaches utilised inside British Prisons, highlighting the areas of improvement and offering a faith based strategy to overcome the concerns highlighted. As the research methodology adopted in the project involves qualitative case study thus it raises some of the serious questions such as how can a religiosity (understanding of faith) be helpful and a big hindrance at the same time, in the journey of Muslim prisoners rehabilitation. A major part of the book discusses such issues and their practical solution in detail. From methodological self improvement and professional perspectives, the book contributes a great deal in the profession of chaplaincy, education and offending behaviour. The study suggests the need of further research in the areas highlighted above. The book offers a critique to the prevailed traditional Pedagogical Muslim approach in and out of the prison exploring core values of Islam from rehabilitative perspectives. This book may be very useful and adaptable starting point for those Muslim countries who are interested to establish faith oriented rehabilitative prison regime.
